Herminio Callos Jr., affectionately known as "Joey," was born on March 12, 1972, in Marikina City, to Herminio Callos Sr. and Celina Callos. As the youngest of four siblings, Joey was the light of his family, bringing warmth and laughter to everyone around him. He shared a particularly close bond with his older brother, Rolly, who was not only his brother but also his best friend. Together, they shared a group of friends and countless adventures growing up.

Joey's heart was as big as his smile. Known for his compassion, he was always willing to lend a hand to others in need. Whether it was helping a friend through difficult times, supporting his colleagues, or offering comfort to those who were struggling, Joey's natural kindness touched the lives of many. His generosity knew no bounds, and he had a gift for making people feel cared for and understood.

His life took a meaningful turn when he joined Jollibee Corporation, where he spent 20 years building a successful career. As he rose from crew member to store manager, Joey not only excelled professionally but also became a mentor and a source of encouragement to his team. His compassion shone through in his leadership, always putting others before himself and ensuring that his colleagues were supported.

After meeting his wife, Beth, Joey's caring nature extended even further, as he became a loving husband and a dedicated father to their four children: John, Innah, Yza, and Xia. His greatest goal was to provide a good future for his family, which led him to move to Canada in search of better opportunities. While working at Tim Hortons in Manitoba, Joey continued to display his compassionate spirit, forming strong bonds with his colleagues and fellow Filipinos in the community.

Just six months into his new life in Canada, Joey faced a devastating diagnosis of lung cancer. Isolated from his family, he leaned on his friend Jackie, his colleague from Jollibee, and other Filipino friends who supported him through his battle. Despite his fear and loneliness, Joey's faith and love for his family kept him going.

Even during his battle with lung cancer, Joey's compassion remained unwavering. Despite his own struggles, he never failed to express gratitude for the kindness and support he received from others. His ability to care for people, even in the face of his own hardship, was a testament to the strength of his character.

Joey's legacy is one of love, sacrifice, and unwavering compassion. His kindness touched the hearts of many, and his memory will continue to inspire those who were fortunate enough to know him.

Rest in peace, Joey. You are now reunited with your mother, watching over your family with love.
