“THE MAN WE CALLED HAMMER”

You were the quiet thunder in our storm,
 The steady hands that kept us warm.
 When life would bend, you never broke—
 You stood like oak, in every stroke.

They called you Hammer—strong and true,
 Because that’s what held the world for you.
 Not nails and wood, but love and care,
 You built our lives with hands that were fair.

You taught us how to stand up tall,
 To rise again each time we’d fall.
 Your laughter shaped our yesterdays,
 Your wisdom lights our future days.

You didn’t just hold things together—
 You made them last through every weather.
 A man of honor, heart, and grace,
 You left your mark in every place.

And though your chair sits empty now,
 We feel your strength, we take a vow—
 To live with courage, love, and pride,
 The way you did, with God as guide.

So rest now, Hammer—your work is done.
 You built a legacy second to none.
 In every heart, your love will stay—
 Our strength, our hero, our guiding way
 -From His Grandchildren
