The End of the Day
Nellis Palmer

When day is done and the sun sinks low, Behind the mountain tops A quiet peacefulness creeps in to soothe my painful thoughts.

And as I stand alone, at the end of the path beside my garden gate, I raise my eyes to the star lit skies to dream and meditate

While the stillness of the eventide enfolds me with gentle arms.
And the cares of the day all fade away, as I bask in all its charm

Then slowly I make my way back again into my humble abode, And I thank my dear Father in Heaven above easing the heavy load.
