A FATHER’S SILENT GOODBYE

You never said the final word,
But in your quiet eyes, we heard
The echo of a thousand days,
A voice that taught in silent ways.
Your hands built more than wood or stone,
They built a home, they shaped our own.
No monument could quite convey
The depth you gave to every day.
The morning feels so strangely wide,
Since you’ve stepped past the great divide.
Yet in the hush, we hear you near,
A breath, a breeze, a presence clear.
We carry now your legacy,
Etched deep in who We’re meant to be.
Your quiet strength we hold with pride-
A father’s love that will abide.
