YOU LEFT PIECES OF YOURSELF BEHIND

You didn't disappear entirely when you left. You left pieces of yourself scattered through every person whose life you touched. I see you in the way people smile when they talk about you. I hear you in the stories that keep getting told. You are still here. Just differently.

That's what I hold on the hardest days. A life like yours doesn't simply vanish. It ripples outward. It continues through the people you loved and the people who loved you back. You changed all of us, and we carry that forward whether we realize it or not.

So you are not entirely gone. You are in every moment of kindness that traces back to you. In every life you touched without even knowing it. You are still here ~ just spread wider than one person could ever hold. And I find you, quietly, everywhere I look.

My Heart Still Holds You.
