BROKEN CHAIN
By: Ron Tranmer

We little knew that day
that God was going to call your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
in death, we do the same.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
you did not go alone.
For part of us went with you,
the day God called you home.
You left us beautiful memories;
your love is still our guide.
And although we cannot see you,
you are always at our side.
Our family chain is broken,
and nothing seems the same,
but as God calls us one by one,
the chain will link again.

Acknowledgement

We acknowledge and appreciate every comforting prayer and expression of love extended to us during these very difficult days.
We will always remember your thoughtfulness.

"Where Service Is Needed"

The Collected Poems of Langston Hughes (gender liberties taken)

For the Negro Nurse there's been no easy way.
The bars have been high, the day a long day
When the hand that could tend the sick or the hurt
Must also combat Jim Crow's dirt.

No caution, no gloves, no antiseptic, no mask
Could protect him from prejudice as he stuck to his task.
Only devotion and the will to be what he set out to be,
Kept the Negro Nurse on his road to today's victory.

From America's garden now
The ugly weeds are being weeded:
Only five states bar their doors to dark hands
That would serve where service is needed.

In the Army, the Navy, colored nurses attend.
His long gallant struggle portends a good end.
"Negro Nurse" is a phrase men no longer need say.
"American Nurse" means all nurses today!

The bars have been high. There is no magic wand;
Only unity and faith have brought this new dawn
Where the rights of democracy to all are ceded:
His skilled hands now may serve where service is needed.
