Wings Of Honor

Read by Julie McNew

He soared where eagles dare to fly, beneath the vast and endless sky.
With steady hands and heart so true, he served the flag, the red, white, blue.

Through storm and sun, through peace and strife, he gave his strength, his heart, his life. Not for glory, nor for fame, but love of country bore his name. The skies he loved now call him home, where heroes rest, no more to roam. His duty done, his spirit free, he flies beyond eternity. We'll see his courage in the dawn; each flag he loved still carries on. A patriot's heart, forever bright now soaring softly into light.
