Missing YOU, GRANDMA

Miss you, Grandma

I still hear your voice when the world gets quiet, soft, and warm—like a whispered secret.

You were my comfort, my gentle guide, the safest place I could ever hide.

Your hugs could heal what words could not.

Your love—the purest thing I've got.

You carried strength wrapped up in grace and left your light in every space.

Now heaven holds the one I miss, but I still feel you in moments like this—

In the way the sun breaks through the gray, in the little things you used to say.

Some nights I cry, some nights I smile, just thinking of you for a while.

I'll keep your love where it always stays—in my heart for all my days.

Your best girl,

Davonna
