To Those I Love

*When I breathe my last upon this earth, don't be sad and filled with pain.
My purpose will be completed. What I've longed for, I've attained.
Don't shed a tear, but smile instead. My death is not the end.
I'm still living – just on a higher plane, with Jesus – my dearest friend.
When my earthly body is lowered, into the cold, dark and dreary ground
It won't lie there forever, only 'til the trumpet's sound.
My spirit will still be living, for I was saved by grace.
I'll be dwelling with my Savior in that glorious, heavenly place.
And when the final trumpet sounds, first the dead in Christ shall rise
Then my body that was buried will be caught up in the skies.
It will meet there with my spirit and the two shall be entwined.
To form the perfect body that my precious Lord designed.
If God has not yet called you, before that final trumpet sounds,
You'll be changed and rise to meet him. For you too, are Heaven bound.*

We thought of you today, but that is nothing new;
We thought of you yesterday and the day before that too.
We'll think of you tomorrow, and as the years come and go,
We'll think about you always because we loved you so.
