

Jack was predeceased by his parents and his six sisters, Verna, Eileen, Thelma, Pam, Jenette, and Gail. One can only imagine the reunion that has taken place.

Music was one of Jack's great passions. You could often find him with a guitar in his hands and a song on his lips. Music wasn't just something he enjoyed — it was something he shared. He turned that love into a part-time career, forming friendships and touching lives with a voice that drew people in. Through music, he created connection. Through song, he created joy.

Jack was also a master storyteller. He had a gift for capturing a room's attention — whether with a heartfelt memory, a well-timed joke, or a remark that might generously be described as witty... and perhaps, occasionally, a little sarcastic. His humour was part of his charm. He made people laugh, think, and feel welcome.

Above all, Jack will be remembered for his love — for Marilyn, for his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, and for the life they built together. He showed up. He cheered loudly. He sang boldly. He loved deeply.

Though we will miss his voice in the stands, his stories at the table, the hum of tires on a long summer highway, and the music that filled the room, we carry him with us — in every family gathering, every shared laugh, every familiar tune strummed on a guitar.

Jack's life was rich, full, and well-lived. And the love he gave will continue to echo for generations.

Rest easy, Jack. Your song lives on in all of us.

In Loving Memory of Jack Gordon Beach

May 24, 1940 - February 24, 2026
85 Years

John "Jack" Gordon Beach

May 24, 1940 – February 24, 2026

Today we celebrate the life of Jack — a beloved husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and friend.

Jack was born on May 24, 1940, in Winnipeg, MB. At the age of two, he was lovingly adopted by George Wesley and Lena May Beach and raised in Southern Manitoba. From those early beginnings grew a man whose life would be defined by devotion — to family, to music, and to community.

In 1963, Jack married the love of his life, Marilyn. Their marriage was the foundation of everything that followed — a partnership filled with love, laughter, and unwavering support. Together, they built a beautiful family and raised five children: Laurie (Kelly) Beach-Norrington, Wesley (Kathy) Beach, Heather (Robert) Sweetman, Stephen (Kathy) Beach, and Bev (Hugh) Fraser.

Jack was not just a father — he was present. He was active in his children's lives, especially when it came to sports and activities. Whether coaching baseball, standing behind the bench in hockey, or cheering loudly — sometimes very loudly — from the stands, Jack was there. His voice carried encouragement, pride, and sometimes playful critique. His kids always knew he was their biggest fan.

And then there were the family vacations — the kind that become legend over time. Seven people packed into a big old Chrysler New Yorker, galivanting across Western Canada and down through the United States. There were long stretches of highway, suitcases wedged into every available inch of trunk space, road maps folded and refolded, and a few spirited debates about directions along the way. There was laughter, singing — of course — and the kind of togetherness that only comes from hours on the road. Those trips weren't just vacations; they were adventures. They were where memories were made, patience was tested, and family bonds were strengthened somewhere between the Prairies and the Pacific, between border crossings and roadside diners.

That love expanded even further with his eleven grandchildren, Michael Leronowich (Toni), Daniel Leronowich (Kelly), Alyssa Fraser (Sean), Matthew Beach (Wazy), Amanda Baker (Kevin), Joshua Beach (Shawna), Adam Sweetman (Jody), Sarah Alexander (James), Stephanie Johnson (Brandon), Daphne Beach, and Jack Beach (Harlee); his four step-grandchildren, Patrick Stubbs, Andrew Stubbs, Nicholas Goodwin, and Keri McLeod. And then came the great-grandchildren — Katie, Patrick, Alex, Robby, McKenna, Lisanna, Sadie, Flora, Monty, Maxine, Jaxon, Morgan, and Bella — each one another source of pride and joy. His legacy lives on vibrantly through each of them.
