

What is dying?

Is it when a soul no longer cares about losing or winning?
Is it when the deep inner longing for giving of oneself - one life - has fled? Or does death creep silently and clutch the soul when one no longer feels the need to love - to clutch tightly to this earth and all things in it,
and receive in return an eternal contentment.

Is dying when you no longer care?

When there is no feeling inside but a devoid empty nothingness.

Is that dying?

Or is death a slow gradual drawing of the spirit - of exuberance, zealous joy, soft sadness. Does death come when the harsh cruelness of the world breaks a spirit?

Does it steal upon you by slowly eroding your bright dreams through the drudgery of everyday living?

Is living dying?
