

In Loving Memory

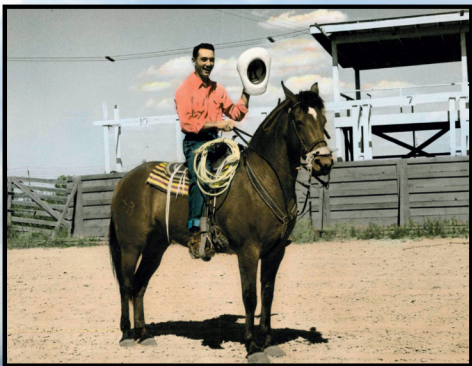

In his hands, each broken thing found grace,
A master craftsman with a gentle face.
His touch could mend both heart and gear,
A soothing balm to those held dear.
Now silence echoes where his laughter kissed
A man of magic, who will be sorely missed.

In the heart of the forest, where the wild rivers flow,
 Lived a man whose love for his family did endlessly grow.
 With laughter and joy, his life was a vibrant song,
 Nature's embrace was where he felt he belonged.
 He cherished each sunrise, every whispering tree,
 In his world of love and adventure, truly free.
