dedication, love, and a commitment to family that inspired all who knew him.

Leonard had a long and fulfilling career as a Ditch Rider for the Aberdeen-Springfield Canal Company until his well-deserved retirement. He graduated from Aberdeen High School in 1966 and, after serving his country honorably in the US Army, he furthered his education in both Idaho and Colorado. Leonard was stationed in Turkey during his time in the military and often reminisced about the new places and people he encountered. His thoughtful nature and sharp humor shone through as he playfully debated the conspiracy theories surrounding the moon landing, firmly believing in the integrity of the mission do to the nature of his duties in the Army.

A gentle soul, Leonard was known for his big heart and willingness to help others, offering assistance without hesitation at any hour of the day or night. He had a mischievous side, always ready to encourage thoughtful reflection in those around him, yet he also embodied an acceptance that went against the grain of his generation's tendencies. Those who knew Leonard appreciated that while he extended trust to others, it was a privilege not easily regained once lost.

Leonard was a jack of all trades, with hobbies that included fishing (drowning the worm), photography, reading, and woodworking. He found joy in invention and problem-solving, always eager to lend a hand or share a laugh. Some of the most cherished memories that his family holds dear revolve around family adventures to national parks, playful moments with his children, and the countless hours spent supporting them through their educational journeys.

In his personal life, Leonard was especially proud of his role as a father, grandfather, and great grandfather. His love for his children, Augustus (Joe) Isaak and Jenifer Marie Isaak-Sprayberry, was paramount, and he embraced the opportunity to adopt them, ensuring they would always be part of his life. He took profound pride in aiding his grandchildren through school, celebrating their achievements alongside them. Leonard is also survived by his sister Charlotte; his nephews, Peter and Joe; three grandson, Collin, Gowen, and Garradyn; and seven great-grandchildren, all of whom were treasured members of his family.

Leonard was preceded in death by his parents, Elmer and Dorothy Isaak, as well as his first wife, Marlene, who passed away on January 8, 1976, and his second wife, Julia, whose passed on June 10, 2011. Their memories remained close to his heart, and throughout his life, he cherished the love he found with both of them.
