

But charity is the pure love of Christ, and it endureth forever; and whoso is found possessed of it at the last day, it shall be well with him.

~ Moroni 7:47

For if I love blossoms and meadows and walking,
I learned how to love them, dear mother, from you.

~ Children's Song Book, #202

Each of us is little more than a conglomeration of the people in this world who have touched our lives for good. Our hearts are composed of the people we meet. They come into our lives, they occupy a part of our souls, and they make us who we are. That's why, sometimes, when they leave us, we can feel like half a person, like a part of us has died. That huge Lucy King part of our hearts feels void right now. At times like this, it can feel like it is fading altogether, but it doesn't have to. The next time you are doing Lucy-King-type things, like feeding a whole bunch of people, sending a thank you note, accompanying someone on the piano, or just really doing anything that facilitates the comfort in someone else's life, Lucy will be there with you. As we live our lives for others just like she taught us, the Lucy King part of us will get stronger and more vibrant each day. We will feel her near. Lucy did love blossoms and meadows and walking, maybe you do too because of Lucy. Now she can enjoy them with you at all times, like she always wanted! Lucy's greatest love was to help other people, to facilitate their lives, and see them more comfortable and effective. Her greatest happiness was to play a role in helping others become happy. We all learned that from her. Her greatest regret was to learn of someone else's sadness and NOT be able to fly right there, wipe the tears away, and put something on for dinner. Now, flying with angel wings, she'll be right there with us, to soothe our aches and comfort our fears. She loves it! She's in her element now! Elder Uchtdorf said "Over the course of my life, I have had the opportunity to rub shoulders with some of the most competent and intelligent men and women this world has to offer. But I have come to the realization that I am far more impressed by those wonderful and blessed souls who are truly good and without guile." If Elder Uchtdorf could have met Lucy, he would have loved her. Mother Teresa said that there are no great things, just small things done with great love. Lucy might not have been great in the eyes of the world, but her love was great in the eyes of ALL who knew her. It's up to us now to live our lives with that same measure of love. When we do, Lucy will live on with us forever!

In Loving Memory
