For Our Mom

She filled our home with laughter, with recipes and stories too, with gardens growing, books to read, and all the things she'd do.

She taught her children how to love, how to gather, how to care, and somehow always made enough to give to everyone there.

She loved the magic of Disneyland, Tuacahn beneath the stars, but nothing meant as much to her as having us in her arms.

She was a wife, a mother, grandma, a sister, teacher, friend.
She gave so much of who she was and loved us to the end.

A little firecracker, full of spark, with a laugh that filled each room, she brought her love and lively heart and made the whole place bloom.

We wish we had more time with her, more stories still to tell, more meals around her table, more moments, we could dwell.

And when we miss her most of all, we'll remember what she knew:
that families are forever, and love will see us through.

Until we meet again, dear Mom, we'll keep chasing dreams too, and every beautiful memory will always lead us back to you.
