A MAN OF QUIET STRENGTH

You walked through life with steady steps,
With strength that didn't need a sound—
A quiet fire, a gentle heart,
A presence felt by all around.
You taught us with your laughter,
With your patience and your grace;
You left your mark on every life
Without needing to take your place.
And though the lanes are quiet now,
And the days feel not the same—
We smile knowing heaven called
A champion home again.
Your love remains our guiding light,
Your memory—our keepsake true;
For the world is better, kinder still,
Because it once was touched by you.

REMEMBERING CHARLES

With profound love and heavy hearts, the family of Charles Edward Sherman shares the news of his peaceful passing.

Affectionately known as Sherman, he was a devoted son, brother, partner, colleague, and friend whose presence brought warmth, humor, and quiet strength to everyone fortunate enough to know him. Born on November 3, 1960, to the late Cora Lee Hines and Charles Edward Sherman Sr., Sherman built a life characterized by dedication—to his family, his work, and the communities he touched.

He proudly served Georgetown University for over 34½ years, where his reliability, loyalty, and exceptional work ethic earned him deep respect and admiration from colleagues and friends alike.

Outside of his professional life, Sherman found immense joy in one of his lifelong passions: Bowling. For more than 30 years, he actively participated with AMF Bowling, both as a competitor and a provisional bowler. The lanes were a second home to him—filled with laughter, competition, friendships, and cherished memories.

Sherman leaves behind a loving and blended family who cherished him deeply. Although he was not a biological father, he embraced the role of “father” wholeheartedly. He is survived by his bonus children, Nicole and Nicolas Barnes; his godson, Michael Daughtry; and his grandchildren, Cherish Belton and Lori Gamble—each of whom he loved as his own. His father, Charles Edward Sherman Sr., and his sister, Sonya Dickey, along with her husband and children, will forever carry his memory in their hearts.

He is also survived by his devoted life partner, Glinder, lovingly known to him as “G,” who stood faithfully by his side. Their partnership was built on loyalty, companionship, and unwavering love.

Sherman was preceded in death by his mother, Cora Lee Hines, and his younger brother, who now welcome him home to be with the Lord.

Sherman’s spirit lives on in the memories he created, the lessons he imparted, the jokes he often told, the laughter he inspired, and the love he shared so freely.

He will be remembered for his gentle heart, his unwavering loyalty, and the unique way he made everyone around him feel valued and seen.

The family finds comfort in knowing he is at peace and that his legacy continues through all who knew and loved him.
