Life Reflections

Alicia Pauline Johnson was born June 4, 1985, in Saint Barnabas Hospital in Livingston, NJ to Bill Johnson and Alexis Sedares, who lived in Union Township, NJ at the time. From very early on Alicia was a joy to her parents and her extended family. Even as a baby she displayed a dynamic, fun-loving demeanor that stayed with her throughout her entire life.

While living in Union Township she attended public school until opting to complete her education by earning her G.E.D. before obtaining a job in a “clean room” producing computer chips. Having an interest in science, helping others and being a natural born caregiver, she went on to nursing school to become a licensed practical nurse (LPN). Despite the work it took to obtain that certification, she did not hesitate to put her career on the line to help a coworker in need. Being fiercely loyal and supportive to family and friends was among Alicia’s defining traits. Undaunted by the setback in her nursing career, Alicia decided to take on a new challenge and obtain a Commercial Drivers License (CDL). Always a rebel and quick-witted, when asked by males why she would want to drive a truck she replied, “Because my father said I could.” Alicia’s humor was often on the sarcastic side, but her confidence and belief in her abilities were no laughing matter.

Alicia had many gifts that included a clever mind, charisma, a great sense of humor, creativity, a beautiful smile, and an infectious laugh. She was a gifted visual artist with various interests and hobbies that included bowling, and her tattoos and piercings, through which she expressed both her creativity and her often rebellious nature. She was particularly proud of the tattoo she did for her father.

Alicia had more than her fair share of trials and tribulations, but she fought against them daily and held fast to her belief in God and how he made her a force to be reckoned with. She sometimes stretched herself thin helping others, but she consistently exuded a positive attitude and energy that made her a joy to be around. She was cherished by her parents, adored by her grandparents, aunts and uncles, and loved by her siblings, cousins, and friends.

Alicia was many things, a source of pride to all those that helped raise her, a friend to her sister, a confidant to her brother, her cousins’ favorite babysitter and so much more. Still, the role in life she most enjoyed was being a mother. She loved her children Bobby Jr. and Clarity deeply and worked hard to provide them all the happiness she could. They were the love of her life.

There are no words to express how profoundly Alicia will be missed. As she goes to join her grandmother and mother, she leaves behind a grandfather, father, stepmother, uncles, aunts, siblings, cousins, nieces, nephew and a host of friends who love and miss her.
