

A Poem for Aunt Sharon

Some people pass through this world and leave footprints.
Aunt Sharon left light.
For as long as I can remember, she was one of the gentlest souls
I have ever known. Her kindness was constant, not loud or attention-seeking, but steady and true.
She had a way of making people feel seen, loved, and important simply by being herself. She believed deeply in God, and she lived that faith every day. It showed in her compassion, her patience, and in the way she loved others without condition.
Even when she needed to correct you, her words were never harsh. She could scold you with love, guide you with grace, and somehow leave you feeling better than before. That was her gift.
I will always admire her strength. Not the kind that demands to be noticed, but the quiet strength that carries others, comforts them, and stands firm through life's storms. She taught by example, showing us what it means to be kind when it's difficult, faithful when it's tested, and loving without reservation.
Today, my heart aches knowing she is no longer here with us.
Yet I find peace in believing that Heaven opened its gates wide to welcome her home. I imagine her being greeted by those she loved and missed, surrounded by the joy and peace
she spent a lifetime believing in.
The world feels different without her in it. A little quieter.
A little less warm. But the love she gave remains.
It lives on in every life she touched, every lesson she taught,
and every heart she helped shape.
She was my favorite aunt when I was young,
and she remains my favorite still. That will never change.
Aunt Sharon, thank you for your love, your faith, your strength, and your beautiful heart. Thank you for showing us
What grace looks like in human form.
You were a blessing to this world, and now Heaven
has welcomed one of its own.
I love you, and I will miss you always.
