

*He rode the roads with winds that sang,
A biker's heart, where freedom rang.
With leather worn and throttle wide,
He chased the dawn, no fear to hide.
The engine's hum, a steady beat,
A rhythm of a life complete.*

*Through winding paths and endless trails,
He followed dreams with endless sails.
The roads may bend, but not his soul,
For in his heart, the ride's his goal.
Now he's gone, but in the breeze,
He rides with stars, among the trees.
No longer seen on earthly lanes,
But his spirit, free, still remains.
Papa's journey—endless, bold—
A rider's tale, forever told.*
