

A Soul Like Hers

She walked in grace, a light so rare,
With gentle hands and heart laid bare.
The love of Christ shone through her eyes,
As soft as dawn, as vast as skies.

She lived for others, gave her all,
With open arms to catch each fall.
No need too small, no cry unheard,
She healed the world with just a word.

A mama bear, both fierce and kind,
With strength and softness intertwined.
Her children knew a boundless care,
A love so constant, always there.

Each grandchild held a sacred place,
Reflected in her warm embrace.
She saw the soul, the hidden part,
And treasured each with all her heart.

She loved her spouse with quiet might,
A beacon through the darkest night.
Her marriage, built on faith and trust,
Was forged in vows both true and just.

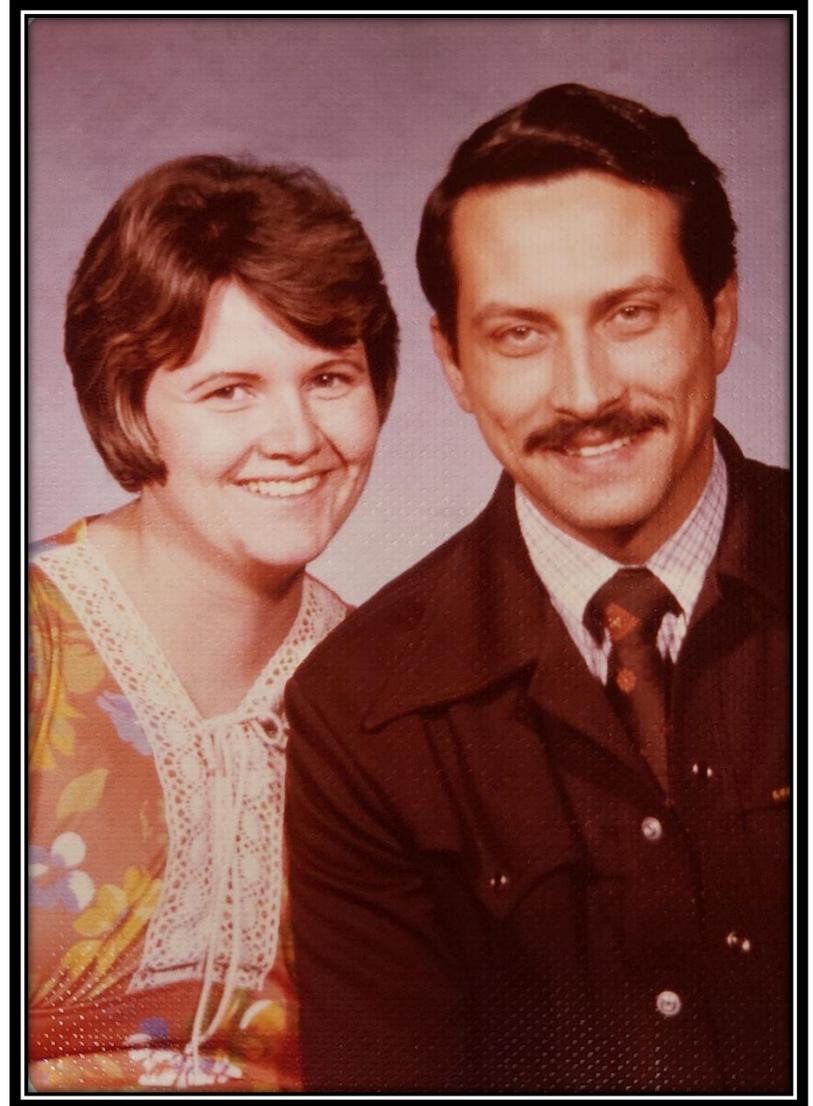

She never asked for praise or fame,
Content to lift another's name.
The most selfless to ever be,
She lived in love so faithfully.

Now heaven holds her, shining bright,
A star that guides us through the night.
And though we ache and miss her so,
Her love still blooms in all we know.

So let us live as she once did—
With hearts wide open, grace amid.
For in her life, we clearly see,
The beauty of eternity.
