He Had You In His Mind (Poem by Chris Powell)

When God created mothers, he had you in His mind.
He knew you'd master motherhood with love and being kind.

He knew you'd teach with humor and listen with intent,
To know your children's inner thoughts and what each feeling meant.

He knew you'd always be there and put your children first,
Even when your life was hard and you felt at your worst.

He knew you'd fight through trials and teach your kids each day,
That if you put your faith in Him they'll always know the way.

He knew you'd be so loyal in sacrificing time,
To make sure that your family knew all mountains could be climbed.

He knew you'd start traditions of gifts and family fun,
And songs and games and inside jokes so loved by everyone.

He knew you'd have great influence, not just through family ties,
But best friends, neighbors, students, too, have learned from your advice.

He knew your kids would love you, and all your grandkids too.
He knew they'd have your strong example of what to say and do.

He knew you'd keep your focus and tune out worldly noise,
And pass your mortal earthly test with confidence and poise.

Of those who've been called Mother, none better will you find.
When God created mothers, He had you in His mind.

In Loving Memory Of

Diane Maxine DeBruler Powell
