Poem Requested by Grandpa HP

I have no wealth to leave you, and no fame.
This must be your inheritance: my name . . .
I have tried to make my name synonymous
In all men's minds, with things the most worthwhile;
With strength to do the right, though none might see me;
 With grit to meet disaster with a smile;
 With loyalty to those with claims upon me;
 With justice equally toward foe and friend;
With honor, truth, integrity, square dealing –
 “My word my bond.”
 Now, as I reach the end,
 Too well I know that I have failed in efforts
 Where I have wanted greatly to succeed;
Too oft I've seen my dreams, bright in the forming,
 Prove naught but vain imaginings, indeed.
 But this I do believe: when I have traveled
Life's twisting road, and worked out Life's great plan, -
When I have gone beyond life's praise or blaming –
 It will be said of me, “He was a Man.”
 And so, because of this, I feel no shame
 When I bequeath to you, my son, my name.
